HOW TO ORDER GOODS.

In ordering from this Catalogue, say "From No. 40."

ALWAYS give the number of the article ordered, and state whether we shall substitute something as near as possible, or not, if the goods ordered are sold out. It is best to make a first and second choice, so that in case the first is gone when the order is received the second may be sent, and thus save time.

On receipt of an order which will require delay in shipment, we acknowledge it at once and state cause; therefore, if after waiting a reasonable time, no acknowledgment is received, please notify us, enclosing a duplicate of the order and state how your money was sent.

If goods are to be sent by Express, and the amount exceeds Five Dollars, they can go C. O. D. if preferred; but as there is no advantage in this, and it adds materially to the expense, we do not recommend it.

As Express Companies decline to collect amounts less than $5.00, such orders cannot be sent C. O. D., and on goods ordered C. O. D. by parties unknown to us, we require a deposit of ten per cent.

GOODS ON APPROVAL.

Our rule to refund money on all purchases that are not satisfactory is really the same as sending everything on approval. Many Express Companies refuse to have goods examined before delivery in such cases, if customers will pay for and receive the goods, they can return those articles they do not want to us, and their money will be refunded; or, if parties unknown to us, ordering goods on approval or otherwise, will kindly send remittance to cover the amount, or New York references, it will prevent the delay involved in obtaining the information necessary where goods are to be charged.

As a matter of convenience, we invite our out-of-town customers to establish a credit with us, so that we can fill their orders promptly, where the amount of purchase is not known, or they prefer for any reason to remit after goods are received.

When goods are to be returned to us by mail, please bear in mind that packages must contain no written matter whatever, and must be so tied up as to admit of being opened without destroying the wrapper. Customers are particularly requested to observe this rule, for a neglect to comply with it will oblige us to pay full letter postage on parcels. Simply direct to us, and say, from ———, filling in your name and address; at the same time write us, giving full particulars.

All communications, to insure prompt attention, should be addressed to

A FEW SUGGESTIONS WITH REGARD TO BABY'S OUTFIT.

THE BAND.—The first need of a young infant is the fine flannel band—which should, in three or four months, be replaced by one knit of Saxony wool. These bands are knit in what is called, in the knitting nomenclature, "seaming," like the top of an enormous stocking. They should be large enough to slip up over the child's bowels, but should, when unstretched, cling closely to the body, and give what little support is needed to the abdomen. These knitted bands should be worn both winter and summer, as they are excellent preventatives against the bowel troubles so prevalent with young children. Indeed, many conservative ladies keep them upon their children until they are three or four years of age.

WOOLEN SHIRTS.—These comfortable little garments have become a necessity even to the poorest baby. The home-made knitted shirts, so popular a few years ago, are almost entirely superseded by the machine-made Saxony or Cashmere. The latter are the most charming productions. Soft as silk, they are daintily finished with pliable silk bindings, beautifully ornamented with a fine feather-stitching. The Saxonys cling close to the body, and are everything one could wish in that grade of goods.

FLANNEL FOR BABY.—In choosing flannel for infants' wear, select from the finer grades that which is soft and of even texture. It need not necessarily be extremely fine, but must be soft and pleasant to the touch. Only such as is made from the finer quality of wool should come in contact with a baby's sensitive skin. It is often asserted as a plea for the cheaper, coarser quality, that, no matter how fine at first, all flannel becomes hard and leathery by constant washing. This assertion is incorrect.

All flannel and knit goods should be washed in warm water—comfortably warm to the hands—into which a table-spoonful of ammonia has been thrown. If soap is used, it should be white and dissolved in the water. In case of spots, a little soap and a few drops of ammonia may be rubbed on the fabric; but much rubbing tends to harden the goods. Souse the garments up and down in the water, squeezing and rubbing them gently with the hands; when clean, rinse in clear water of the same temperature as that in which they were washed. Be sure and rinse out all suds, then pass them through a third clean water which is also of the same degree of heat as the other two.

If a blue tone is desired, add to this last water a few drops of blueing.

It would probably be a source of surprise to most mothers to find how little, if any, money is saved by buying materials and making them up at home; for those who have not looked into the matter have no idea of the system attained in the manufacture of children's clothing, and the wonderfully low prices resulting therefrom. All materials are purchased in large quantities direct from the manufacturers. The goods are so cut that little or nothing is wasted; a large number of hands are constantly employed—no one person doing the whole work on a garment, but each a special part which she alone attends to. By so dividing the labor, each person becomes very rapid, as well as expert, in her special branch. A whole wardrobe is thus made in a very small fraction of the time required for its successful manufacture at home.

On the other hand, if a lady purchases her materials in the small quantities needed, she must necessarily pay the highest prices for each article used, besides often buying much more than is actually required. A few extra inches of fine lace or expensive embroidery for each dress amount to quite a sum when the whole wardrobe is considered, while the extra cambric, flannel, etc., which often remain unutilized, would probably pay for the making of several articles.

Finally, the experience acquired by making thousands of these little garments is offset, in the mother's case, by considerable experimenting, not always followed by perfectly satisfactory results.

For an infant's first wear, ordinary little slips of fine English nainsook are most suitable. These are very simply made, and are trimmed with fine dainty edgings. Six are sufficient, although eight or nine will be found very convenient in cases of emergency.

After the first few weeks of baby's life, one's more intimate callers desire a peep at the little stranger, and the most sensible mother cannot restrain a pardonable pride in her darling's personal appearance. The little slip, which has thus far formed baby's only outer garment, is partially discarded—worn only at night or early morning—and the little dress takes its place. This is also made of fine English goods. The tiny little yokes and sleeves are composed of hair-tucks and feather-stitching, while the whole is edged with the daintiest embroideries. The skirts also receive their share of tucking and feather-stitching, and the little garments cannot fail to please the most fastidious taste. Six of these dresses are considered sufficient, although, as in the case of the little slips, a larger number is desirable.

An exquisite little dress, very suitable for christening or any other dressy occasion, is hand-made—the yoke, sleeves, sash and skirt principally composed of tucks, delicate hem-stitching and drawn work—and the whole finished with the daintiest little edge of embroidery.

In addition to these, a couple of those charming little wrappers, in the various styles described, are almost indispensable if baby's advent is in any but the hottest part of the year. In fact, even then these are extremely useful as protection from draughts or the chilly air of evening or early morning.

SHORT CLOTHES FOR BABY.—The usual age for shortening an infant's clothes is from four to six months. This, however, is not an arbitrary rule, as "circumstances alter cases" in this as in many other things. The weather, the method of heating the house, the exposure baby is subjected to, and many other conditions, must be taken into consideration.

The habit of cutting off the long slips and dresses is not an economical or a satisfactory one. The little garments having already received considerable wear from constant washings, will soon break away at both sleeves and yokes, hardly paying for the work of shortening.

The flannels which present a respectable appearance may be advantageously made into short skirts; but, as the underwear in short clothes is as conspicuous as the dress, the discolored and shrunken skirts are scarcely worth changing.

INFANTS' OUTFITS.

IN this Catalogue we have not attempted to give a description of all the goods we have in stock, but have selected such as we think most desirable; neither are the cuts designed to show the patterns of the embroidery used. We carry a very large assortment, made to suit various tastes, and, if customers when ordering will state their preferences in regard to embroidery—whether a small close pattern, or something more effective is wanted—it will often enable us to make more satisfactory selections than if confined strictly to the numbers described.

In this department we employ persons whose experience renders them exceptionally qualified to give advice or assistance to those who do not feel entire confidence in their own judgment.

WE make a specialty of the outfitting of BOYS, GIRLS AND BABIES, including all ages up to seventeen years. That we offer superior advantages is evident from the fact that we do the largest business of the kind in the world.

We serve absent buyers through our Mail Order Department as well as if they were in the store.

Catalogues, containing descriptions and prices of Infants' Goods, Hosiery and Merino Underwear, Muslin Underwear, Aprons, Misses' and Children's Millinery, Boys' Hats and Caps, Jersey Suits, Furnishing Goods, Shoes, etc., will be sent on application.

For Boys' Suits and Overcoats and Girls' Cloaks and Dresses,

We have found our plan of giving special information in answer to each individual inquiry to be much more satisfactory than the Catalogues formerly issued, for it was impossible in that way to give our out-of-town customers a fair idea of our stock of those goods.

The time necessary for its preparation obliged us to have the matter in the hands of the Engravers and Printers long before all of the styles for the season were ready, so that by the time the book reached our customers our stock contained very many desirable goods not shown in it, and many of the styles prepared early had been sold out; therefore, it never represented fully what we intended to have it represent, i. e., the goods that we had on hand. The result often was disappointment and delay to those ordering from it.

We now prepare cuts and descriptions of our new styles as fast as they are produced during the season.

If you will tell us by mail what you require for your children—giving us some general idea of the colors desired, what the garments are for, etc., just as you would if you called personally at the store—we will immediately send you samples, illustrations, and full descriptions of our latest styles, suitable for the purpose described—your letter of to-day will be answered by illustrations and samples of to-day.

If you do not find the description of any article for children's wear that you want in our Department Catalogues, please write for it; you may be sure that if it is desirable we can furnish it.

It will be seen by reference to the notice, "How to Order Goods," etc., that we agree to refund the money for all unsatisfactory purchases.

What better guarantee can we give as to prices and quality of our goods?

Special attention is called to our "Custom Department," where we make to measure for all ages, in the best style and workmanship, at moderate prices. In this Department we make a special feature of Military School Uniforms.

We would be pleased to be favored with your orders.

Respectfully,

BEST & CO.
